Charles Goodman was born at Stockwell, South London on November 24, 1932.

His legal name was Charles Edward Goodman but he preferred to be known as Edward Charles Goodman, Edward Goodman or simply Ted.

During the Second World War, he was evacuated to the countryside. His parents divorced as a boy; leaving school at fifteen, he joined the family business in which he worked for twenty-five years before moving to Herne Bay with his mother. After her death he became something of a recluse. Although he was once engaged, he never married.

A keen student of history, he was also a cat lover, opening his home to many stray felines.

He was laid to rest in a woodland burial on March 23, 2018 according to his wishes following a secular service which saw the organist playing music from the well-known musical CATS. The small turnout included close relatives and his two helpers; it was organised by his cousin, who was also his executor.
