Sir,

Re your article "Combatting the scourge of homophobia", while no one should condone any form of bullying, neither should they fall for the propaganda of the Organised Homosexual Movement as propagated by Stonewall. There is no such thing as a "gay pupil". Teenagers, especially boys, often have problems growing up, including with their sexuality. "Crushes" are not uncommon and are for the most part not sexual but are based on other things such as admiration, envy, and so on. In time and with proper guidance, most teenagers grow up to be normal heterosexuals.

Organisations such as Stonewall do not simply campaign for fair treatment of homosexuals but to spread the homosexual lifestyle, especially to the young.

Yours Sincerely,
A Baron
