

What Is Canary Mission?

If you think that sounds like a new Tom Cruise action film, think again, this is deadly serious. The domain Canary Mission Dot Org was registered in February this year through a well-known proxy in Arizona to hide the identity of the owner; there is nothing sinister about this, nor is there anything particularly sinister about the website in this age of conspiriology and on-line hatemongering, but it is likely to backfire on those who set it up. So who did set it up? Well, the smears are typical of the Israel Lobby, the one we were once told did not exist, and only an anti-Semite would have suggested otherwise.

Thanks primarily to the Internet though, the cat has long been well and truly out of the bag, indeed as far back as 1993, the not-so-hidden hand of one of the Lobby's most vociferous smearmongers was exposed when Roy Bullock and former police officer Tom

Gerard were arrested for stealing government documents and leaking information to the Anti-Defamation League. Or should that be the Defamation League?

The ADL was founded in 1913, ostensibly to combat anti-Semitism, but it has long been engaged in far less honourable activity such as smearing legitimate critics of the Zionist régime, including anti-Zionist Jews, and indeed a significant percentage of the world population! There is no direct evidence that Canary Mission is the brainchild of anyone within or connected to the ADL, but its founder/s are clearly cut from the same cloth.

The Canary Mission's ostensible mission statement is "to expose individuals and groups that are anti-Freedom, anti-American and anti-Semitic in order to protect the public and our democratic values."

The truth is very different, those who defend Israel unconditionally are not the slightest bit concerned with either freedom or democratic values, and as the massive support afforded the bandit state by what PLO leader Yasser Arafat once alluded to as "those other Occupied Territories" (ie the US Congress) is largely responsible for the hatred so many Arabs, Moslems and others feel towards the US, they clearly don't give a stuff about America either.

The Canary Mission's database includes smears on dozens of pro-Palestinian activists on the American campus, including many anti-Zionist Jews. One of the organisations listed as anti-Semitic is the Mondoweiss website, which was set up by two New York Jews who believe the Palestinians should be treated like human beings instead of dogs.

One of the Jewish individuals so smeared is Liza Behrendt of Jewish Voice for Peace. One of the academics so smeared is Francis Boyle, a professor of law who is alluded to as a prodigious conspiracy theorist.

Professor Boyle is long in the tooth, but this website was set up to black ball primarily young people, to attempt to persuade corporations not to employ them, and clearly to frighten them out of supporting the Palestinian cause. There is all the usual rhetoric about the demonisation of Israel and its being an Apartheid state. The reality is that Israel's leaders are responsible for that demonisation, and the comparison with Apartheid is unfair to the previous South African régime, which although a police state never bombed black townships murdering thousands of people including hundreds of children as the Israelis have done twice in the past seven years to Gaza.

The grain of truth in the smears used against the young people including students targeted here is that they use angry rhetoric, which is due more to their youthful enthusiasm than irrational hatred. It remains to be seen if any of them will have their employment prospects seriously damaged as happened in the UK when the Economic League operated a secret blacklist against people working largely in the construction industry. Political Zionism is now fighting a rearguard action due largely to its excesses having alienated all but the faithful. (Indeed it is likely that those behind Canary Mission realise this; the website domain expires next year; one would have expected them to have registered it for five years). There are now over well over 2 million Moslems in the United States, including many whites. In the future, no American graduate is likely to be out of work for long, at least not on account of the lies, innuendo, smears and hatemongering of a website which supports a nation that murders children while sticking up two fingers to the rest of the world.
