

Is There A Case For Shooting Illegal Migrants?

By Alexander Baron - Aug 2, 2015

Photo: Reuters

270
SHARES

Before anyone flies into a fit at the mere question, here is what someone wrote a few years ago:

If you cross the North Korean border illegally you get 12 years hard labour.

If you cross the Iranian border illegally you are detained indefinitely.

If you cross the Afghan border illegally, you get shot.

If you cross the Saudi Arabian border illegally, you will be jailed.

If you cross the Chinese border illegally, you may never be heard from again.

If you cross the Venezuelan border illegally, you will be branded a spy and your fate will be sealed.

If you cross the Cuban border illegally, you will be thrown into political prison to rot.

If you cross the Mexican border illegally, you go to jail for 2 years.

In contrast, if you cross the American border illegally you get: a job, a driver's license, a social security card, welfare, food stamps, credit cards, subsidised rent or a loan to buy a house, free education, free health care, a lobbyist in Washington, billions of dollars worth of public documents printed in your language, and the right to carry your country's flag while you protest that you don't get enough respect.

What is the difference? The real difference is white guilt compounded by racial brainwashing.

All sovereign nations have not simply a right but a duty to protect both their borders and their own citizens; clearly the UK is currently failing on both counts. If you cross illegally into some countries on whatever pretext, you will find yourself in serious trouble. For years, Indian border guards have been shooting Bangladeshis who have been crossing their border illegally, which is undoubtedly the reason the UK has a major problem with illegals while India does not.

Lets look at this objectively, there are now thousands of illegals trying to enter the UK from Calais. These people are not asylum seekers because no one domiciled in France needs to claim asylum in the UK. They want to come here because many of them speak passable English – the lingua franca of the Universe – and because they know Britain is a soft touch, however much propaganda we hear from the usual suspects about racism.

There is also a widely held belief even in this era of austerity that somehow whites and especially white Britons owe them something. This belief is sorely misconstrued. By refusing to take the necessary if brutal step of deterring these people, the Government is giving the green light for more and more and more to come. How many are we to take, a hundred thousand, a million, ten million, a hundred million? Before you laugh at that figure, think again, there are already potentially millions clammering to enter Europe.

Some of these illegal migrants are totally ruthless, there has been acknowledged people trafficking, lorry drivers have been attacked, even stabbed. In addition to that, there have been a number of deaths; recently a migrant was struck and killed by a lorry leaving the Channel Tunnel.

There is though another problem, while the vast majority of these people are economic migrants, there is credible evidence of a terrorist element trying to enter the UK in disguise. We really do not need any more of this in view of recent events in Tunisia and elsewhere.

By dispensing summary justice on violent thugs who stab or otherwise attack lorry drivers, the UK authorities will send a firm signal to these people – don't come here. Even if only half a dozen of them were shot (not necessarily fatally) that would undoubtedly save lives in the long, medium and even the short term because it is only a matter of time before others are killed by traffic, or perhaps there is a major disaster.

There needs too to be a longer term solution, and that requires long term planning rather than knee jerk reactions. If the Western powers had not intervened in the Middle East, the Syrian conflict for example would have ended in a negotiated settlement. By intervening on the losing side, ostensibly to help stop a slaughter, our governments have simply helped prolonged the hostilities and increase the human suffering.

The migrants camp at Calais has now been in existence for well over a decade. It should be torn down and all its denizens deported back to their home countries, simply put on planes or boats and shipped out. Those who agree to go should be given a relocation grant; those who do not, should be booted out with nothing. Even if they were paid a thousand dollars per person, that expense would soon be recouped. As for those whining liberals and anti-racists who insist they should be allowed into the UK instead, these people should be required to sponsor immigrants, put them up under their own roofs and feed them out of their own pockets. That would see 99%+ of them having an instant change of heart.

270
SHARES