

The Latest News

Britain Must Say No To Yet More Refugees

FEATURED NEWS POLITICS

By Alexander Baron

15
SHARES

The death of a two year old boy, images of whose body has now gone viral, is being used in a cynical campaign by the usual suspects to brainwash Britons into opening our borders yet again. Back in the 1970s we faced less sophisticated campaigns based on misconstrued propaganda relating to the Second World War. After all, how could anyone who opposed uncontrolled immigration be anything but a Nazi, right?

The suckers fell for it, we even had reams of race relations legislation, and now every soap opera must have at least one non-white character, usually several, with mandatory miscegenation thrown in. Has this done us any good, even without race riots and homegrown Islamist terrorism? We would have done far better to follow the advice of Sir Oswald Mosley, and mind Britain's business. That way we would have had no mass immigration, nor would we would have interfered capriciously in other people's countries; the Israelis would have been forced to allow a Palestinian state, there would have been no or far fewer conflicts in the Middle East, no sanctions against Iran, no war on terror, and a lot more money to invest in new technologies which would have benefitted

Africa and similar backward places far more than the aid provided by Western charities that employ executives on telephone number salaries.

Good fences make good neighbours. This doesn't mean we should not provide reasonable humanitarian aid for desperate people, we should, but apart from that, they are not our problem. It is one thing to give money to a beggar in the street; it is quite another to invite him into your home and allow him to help himself to the contents of your refrigerator as Yvette Cooper wants us to do with her whine about every town taking ten migrants.

With airhead nonsense like that, do we really need more women in Parliament? If you allow in a thousand, ten thousand will come; allow them in, and a hundred thousand will come; then a million; then ten million. Where does it stop? If Prime Minister Cameron has any sense, it will stop here. And it will stop now.

The other thing these airheads seem to forget is that although Britannia may have once ruled the waves, Britain is not even a fifth rate power anymore. The current situations in Syria and elsewhere are not only not our concern, they are not even in our domain of influence.

And don't think all those refugees will be cute kids because they won't. Some of these claiming asylum are doing so on – would you believe it – grounds of their sexual orientation? Like Subhi Nahas. We don't need you, gay boy, we have more than enough homos of our own; have you seen Coronation Street lately? No Briton, white or otherwise, indeed no European, white or otherwise, should be duped by this brainwashing. Let them be taken in by the Gulf States, by Israel, or even by Nigeria. Not by Europe, and especially not by what is left of Britain.

This opinion article was written by an independent writer. The opinions and views expressed herein are those of the author and are not necessarily intended to reflect those of TheLatestNews.com

15
SHARES