Sally Morgan is performing at Croydon's Fairfield Halls on November 27. If you are in the area, be sure not to go.

Psychic Sally is actually on tour at the moment, performing at venues grand and not so around the country. The lady herself has a very grand claim to fame, she was the spiritual adviser to Diana Princess of Wales. Clearly her powers of prediction failed her on that occasion, otherwise she would have told Diana to take the Metro that fateful August night. Someone did predict Diana's death in a car accident, the lady herself, only she didn't think it would be an accident. A letter in her own hand said there was or would be a plot to kill her, and the person she believed was behind that plot was her ex-husband. While this was grist to the conspiracy mill, it was clearly the workings of a disturbed mind, or at best a woman who was desperately unhappy.

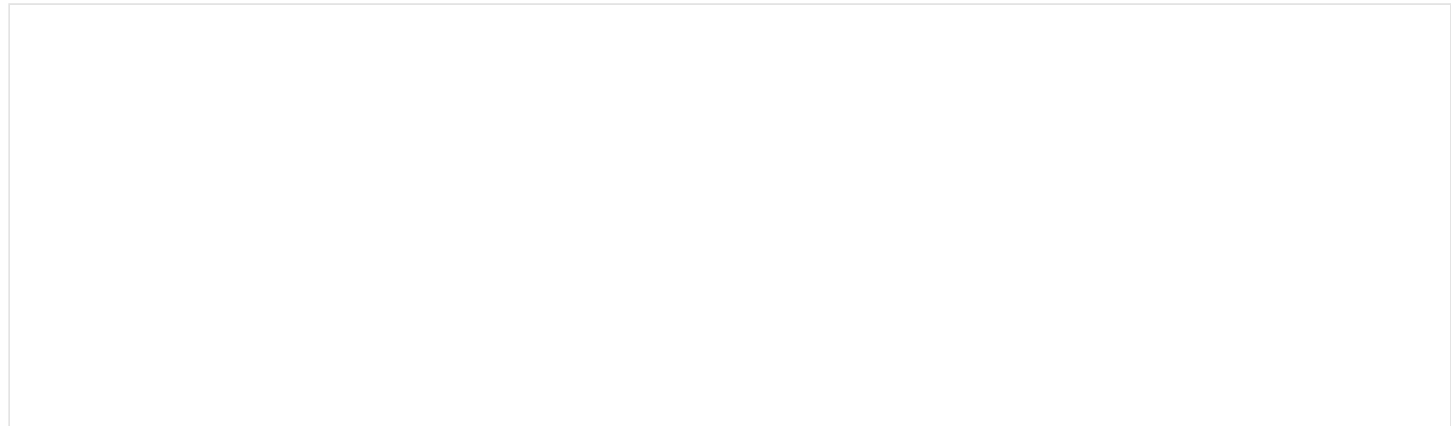

A far more predictable premature demise was that of Amy Winehouse. It didn't take a crystal ball to predict her joining the 27 Club; her death was clearly a shock because she appeared to be getting her life back on track, but it will have surprised no one who knew her, nor most of her fans.

It does appear to have surprised Mrs Morgan though because she told Amy's biggest fan, her Dad, that one day she would make him a proud grandfather.

Unlike Colin Fry, Sally Morgan has never been caught using outright fakery, though sadly it is her fans who are the real fakers, because they are kidding themselves. For the most part these are daffy women, but they can also be vulnerable people, men as well as women who are looking for answers that no one can give them, looking for meaning in the death of a loved one, or of some tragedy.

If you are not familiar with the techniques used by spirit mediums, you will find lots of footage by skeptics on YouTube explaining cold reading and other tricks of the trade. Like many self-styled psychics, Sally Morgan claims to talk to the dead, we can all do that, but as the man said, will they reply?
