Conspiracy crank Richard Gage is back in the news again. Recently he has been given space by motor mouth Alex Jones to spout off about 9/11. What else? Does he have anything new to say? Sadly no, same old lies and nonsense, just a slightly different presentation. On October 9, an interview with him was uploaded to The Alex Jones Channel on YouTube in which he waxed lyrical about his new video (well, somebody has to). This is he says, something that has been around for a while, but he has just gone round to editing it.

His favourite hasn't changed, Building 7, one of the great non-mysteries of our time. It would be tiresome to debunk all his nonsense, others have done that in minute detail including comedian Edward Current, whose short video is worth watching. After watching it, try to remember that Current is the comedian while Gage is the architect.

A few bullet points though. It is simply not true that very few people realise Building 7 collapsed on September 11, 2001, even though it was not hit by a plane, or if it is true, there is a very unsinister reason for it. Few people realise the first capital of England was not London, but Winchester. Is that because it is a closely guarded secret, or because most people don't study ancient history in such detail?

Building 7 did not collapse at free fall speed into its own footprint, not quite, as is made clear in the Current video.

Collapse of the Building 7

And here is a question for you Richard, we know how many people died in the Twin Towers collapse, but how many died in the collapse of Building 7, would you believe none – what does that indicate? How about the people in charge on the ground knew it was going to collapse well in advance? Because it was largely enveloped in smoke, photographs and footage of its last hours are rare, but they can be found if you look a little harder. We even know the identity of the last man out, Barry Jennings, who died in August 2008 a month short of his fifty-fourth birthday. Not a great age, and nuttier cranks than Gage have attempted to make something out of that, but there is no reason for you to be taken in either by them or by him.

Yes, 9/11 was the result of a conspiracy, it involved 19 men with boxcutters and probably no more than a handful of others beyond America's shores; these men were sworn enemies of America who dressed themselves in the cloak of Islam, and no amount of conspiridiocy by Richard Gage or anyone else will alter those prosaic facts. Of course, what happened afterwards was something entirely different, but just as no one should underestimate the perfidy of the American Government, likewise no one should confuse cause and effect.
