Good article, Alexander. I agree that the accusers are all fabricating tales for a number of different, sometimes overlapping reasons including political, economic, psychological and social ones. However, the accusers are at the same time being used by other forces to advance their own agendas. The mass media have consistently broken the most fundamental rules of journalism to prejudice the public. They constantly repeat the absurd charges and never bother to investigate the facts, and fail to notice how the stories change significantly with each telling. The legal system has allowed the most absurd and crazy lawsuits for defamation to proceed. Who has ever heard of suing a man because his lawyer claims he is innocent? We are talking about a systematic and catastrophic failure in multiple elements in American and apparently British Society.

This is an awesome article that addresses the facts. Sadly, to address the excessive amount of accusers and their inconsistent fabrications it would make a good size book, probably a whole season on TV episodes to exploit each and every lying wench for who and what she really is!

Two issues are intertwined. One is the presumption of guilt for anyone accused of sexual assault. The other is moral panic. Moral panic is a form of hysteria and group think. We saw this in the 80's when child abuse fears crystallized into quackery where so called psychologists were allowed to testify to "recovered memories". Many lives were destroyed. Now the rape panic has crystallized into investigations in which accusation is treated as fact on college campuses. The Cosby case is trial balloon by the witch hunters to eliminate the presumption of innocence where sexual assault is concern. there is a transparent politics to this. There is a faction of the so called feminist movement which wants to empower themselves- get publicity, make political careers etc. Cosby is a means to entrenching their movement at the expense of men. This is war. Truth is always the first casualty of war.

Excellent article. The media is so powerful they now believe they should be judge and jury. They don't search for fact and are more interested in opinions to push their agenda, they no longer care to inform.

I saw the show of CNN yesterday on Planned Parenthood and was interested to hear what the facts were. Forget it, they had a clear agenda to discredit the videos, although I don't think it worked, showing a fully grown fetus really hurts. I was undecided on the issue and I am not 100% on the side of defunding planned parenthood, even if we have to shut the government down. I couldn't even watch the little bit they were showing those fully grown fetus dying. painful.
