If that idea sounds quaint, there is already a Himalayan Centre in London, sort of – the Himalayan Centre, London Road, Edinburgh. This is an entirely new venture though.

On January 9, 2016, there will be a preliminary event billed as a fund-raiser at St Peter's Anglo-Catholic Church, Clapham. The speakers will include Vladimir Weidemann, who teaches meditation, and David Parry, who wears many hats including that of promoting cultural excellence.

The plans of the small group behind this project are ambitious to say the least. They include bringing ascetics from India to address audiences in London. Details can be found on the usual events pages for the capital.
