

Has Sickipedia Gone For Good?

By Alexander Baron - Mar 16, 2016

23
SHARES

Sickipedia is, or was, a site that hosted some of the sickest jokes on the Internet. A few weeks ago it crashed, and the notice below appeared on its homepage. Back in 72 hours, folks! That has surely been the longest 72 hours in history. The last message on its Twitter feed is dated February 9, and the men who run it are nowhere to be seen or heard of. One must presume it is run by men; few women would ever sink so low.

We have a sick problem

but this isn't some type of sick joke

Sickipedia is currently down. We are having serious technical difficulties.

We are so sorry to all of our loyal users. we are working around the clock to fix the situation.

Quick update to everyone, we are working with a UK based data recovery specialist to fully recover everything, however we need another 72 hours or so to complete recovery. We are so sorry to everyone because of this major inconvenience.

© 2016 - Sickipedia.org

Back in 72 hours – apparently not, and some would say hopefully never.

Some would say it's no bad thing the site is down or perhaps gone for good, but if you want to taste a sampler, the Internet Archive has captured over 240,000 of its urls, which means there must be at least a couple of good jokes there. Well, half-good ones. Here is a tiny selection chosen totally at random, verbatim – the ones that can be published on this family friendly news website. Many good jokes are parochial or ephemeral. Some are both. This means if you don't understand any of them, they probably aren't funny. Don't hurry back, guys.

I was at a cash machine when an old lady came up to me and asked to check her balance.

So I pushed her over.

9 out of 10 men prefer large boobs.

The other man prefers the 9 men.

I see Germany beat Poland in the European Championships. Not much the English can do because they aren't there. But, true to form, the French surrendered the next day.

Did you know that the mobile phone is the only thing in the world which blokes argue over who's got the smallest?

My ex-girlfriend has a picture of a sea shell tattooed on her inner thigh.

If you put your ear to it, you can smell the ocean.

I just heard my next door neighbour's window smash and his burglar alarm went off so

I immediately sprang into action...

I went round there and got myself a free telly.

23
SHARES