With the current situation in the Middle East, and Europe still reeling from the Charlie Hebdo massacre, it is easy to take pot shots at Islam, and just as easy to be taken in by the narratives of the Islam-haters, especially those with dark skins. One of Islam's most vociferous critics in the West fits that description; Ayaan Hirsi Ali is feted by Conservatives and Liberals alike, she appears to have all the right credentials: attractive, intelligent, eloquent, and fluent in six languages – why wouldn't you want to invite her to a party?

Appearances can be deceptive however, in her most recent rant – written to promote her latest book – she reiterates her claims about Islam. What is usually forgotten is that the country with the largest Islamic population is Indonesia, one that is for the most part stable with none of the ugliness we see in relation to the Middle East. What is also conveniently forgotten is that most of the victims of the Islamist fanatics are Moslems rather than Westerners. What is happening in the Islamic world today is akin to what happened in England in the 1640s, in France in the late Eighteenth Century, and the United States from the 1770s until the early Nineteenth Century. The big difference is that muskets and cannonballs did relatively little damage by comparison.

Ayaan Hirsi Ali

Hirsi Ali is surely not unaware of this, so her insistence that the political ideology known as Islamism is wedded inevitably to the religion itself is a belief she promotes for her own purposes. Certainly she has made a comfortable living out of it. She is also not quite what she appears to be. When she turned up in the Netherlands in 1992 she represented herself as a refugee fleeing if not for her life then for her well-being from the repressive Somali régime. In reality, she was no poor peasant girl, and had been living in Kenya where she received a first rate education. She is far from the only member of her wealthy family who is fluent in English.

After ditching her first husband she betrayed her Somali heritage as well as her religion, marrying a white academic and henchman for the moneyed plutocracy. No one should be taken in by this woman, especially in her now adopted home, the United States.

Pamela Geller comes from an entirely different background; a native of New York, her attack on Islam is based on the phoney narrative of the clash of civilisations, as far as she concedes Islam has given anything to the world. Geller's agenda is all too obvious, for her Israel is in the vanguard of the defence of the West, or as she put it in a series of anti-Islamic advertisements, we should support the civilised man against the savage. The idea that mass murderer Benjamin Netanyahu is a civilised man will come as a great surprise to the occupants of Gaza, those he didn't murder in the last outrage which some have the temerity to call a war.

Geller is so far off this planet that even most Zionist Jews won't give her the time of day; her latest stunt is a cartoon competition guying the Prophet Muhammad. This grotesque theme was done to death in 2006, when Western cartoonists made their point about free speech and a free press, on their own terms, of course. The only reason to revisit this nonsense can be to stir up even more trouble; her continued baiting of Moslems is in stark contrast to her non-condemnation of the official persecution of Dieudonné, whom she accuses of unabashed Jew-hatred.

Like Hirsi Ali, no one should be taken in by this woman either.
