

Extreme Sexual Depravity In The News

Most people take a progressive view of sex nowadays, even those who hold strong religious views about it tend to live and let live as long it is conducted in private between consenting adults. What though if it does not involve consenting adults, or even adults? This is when the law must step in.

In South London, a naked man has been spotted masturbating at a bus stop, aggressively apparently. Perhaps this is where the phrase “bashing the bishop” comes from? Whatever, if the police were inclined to dismiss the report from a woman who saw him in the Grove Park area, there was shortly a second sighting. It beggars belief that anyone should do something like this, but presumably this is a fellow who has serious mental problems.

What is worse than a man abusing himself in public? How about a woman having sex with a dog? Jenna Louise Driscoll looks quite attractive, until you realise what she appeared in court for, or didn't appear on this occasion. She made headlines sometime ago after she was accused of having sex with her dog, and filming it for good measure. There appears to have some sort of error on her part which led to her failing to appear at a Brisbane court, and she doesn't appear to have been in a good mood either, because she is said to have assaulted a photographer and told him to do something unmentionable, though not as unmentionable as what she did and filmed for the whole world to see. Incredibly, she is said to be completing a diploma in business management. Let us hope she doesn't apply for employment with a kennel because she's already in the doghouse. Ain't life a bitch? Well, maybe not a bitch, but...

Incredibly, if she had been domiciled in Denmark rather than in Australia she would not have been committing a criminal offence because having sex with animals was legal there. Happily, the law has now been amended.

Who would want to have sex with dogs and other animals, you may ask, surely Miss Driscoll is an anomaly? Sadly, that is not the case; recent reports from around the world include a 79 year old man from South Carolina, a man from Royal Wootton Bassett, and – last August – a teenager in Nigeria. All three were said to have had sex with dogs. There really are some sick people out there.

Members of the uncovered paedophile network

Depraved though these acts may be, most people would agree that a man who has sex with a child is far worse, and men who do not simply prey on children but on babies, grooming – to use a fashionable word – the parents of the victims, are beyond the pale. What is all the more shocking is that this is not a case of a lone pervert. At Bristol Crown Court, a group of paedophiles have been convicted of unspeakable crimes including the rape of a baby. Three of them participated in these obscene acts while the other four were said to have conspired to arrange and watch the abuse. They have yet to be sentenced but all will surely be looking at 15 years and upwards. Often when cases like this are reported, so-called experts tend to talk up the depravity, but sadly that is not the case here, rather the reporting has clearly been curtailed to avoid unduly distressing the public.
